IN MEMORIAM:
In loving memory of my mother, Edna W. Baldwin, who departed this life 19 years ago, Feb. 2.
It was on a Thursday night,
I'll never forget the day,
When an angel came and
Took my mother away.

All she left are memories
Of a mother I loved so well;
And to think she will never
Come back again.
Hurts more than I can tell.

All I can do, dear mother,
Is go and tend your grave,
And leave behind a token of love,
To the best mother, God ever made.
—Sadly missed by Daughter, Cassie.

New Method Is Producing Illinois Oil

URBANA, Ill.—More than 20 million barrels of additional oil with a value of more than $50,000,000 have been recovered from previously abandoned Illinois oil fields as the result of water flooding oil sands, it has been reported by Dr. M. M. Leighton, chief of the state geological survey division of the State Department of Registration and Education.

The new method, which is being adopted generally throughout the rapidly expanding Illinois oil basin, was pioneered by survey scientists in 1941.

Water flooding is justified, Dr. Leighton said, because normal pumping of oil sands will recover from about one-fourth of the oil volume that was originally present.

"In other words," Dr. Leighton explains, "approximately three-fourths of the crude oil would be left in the earth if operations were abandoned after pumping proved uneconomical."

The survey chief pointed out that since 1884, a total of 468 oil fields have been discovered in Illinois and a total production of 1.5 billion barrels has been obtained. Ordinary pumping will recover much more, but water flooding will add another 600 million barrels, conservatively estimated.

Last year alone, 4.5 million barrels were produced by water flooding out of a total production of 62 million barrels for the entire state.

Dr. Leighton said that in certain fields the accumulated recovery by water flooding is already in excess of the original recovery by ordinary pumping. He cited the Patoka water flood project as an outstanding example and expressed the opinion that ultimate recovery by water flooding will be about three times what pumping alone would yield.

Predicting that recovery of this huge volume of oil will extend over many years, Dr. Leighton says that "secondary recovery operations will probably last another 20 years, possibly more. Even so, there probably will be left in the underground sands several billion barrels of residual oil which cannot be recovered by known processes, but these problems will be worked out by the new petroleum engineering division of the state geological survey."

Survey scientists report that water flooding operations require careful planning and supervision on the part of the oil operator and his petroleum engineers. Of great importance is the location of an adequate supply of water for injection purposes.

Geologists emphasize the importance of pooling the interests of several operators in a single field on a "unitization" basis in order to secure a much more effective water flooding operation.

Almost a dozen of the larger producing fields in the state are now unitized, the largest being the Salem field which has eight separate oil-producing formations and 9,600 productive acres.

Blood Pays Off, Says Soldier Saved from Death

WASHINGTON—"Blood save my life."

With those four words, Corporal James Durham summed up his appreciation to some unknown blood donor.

The 19-year-old veteran of some of the toughest fighting in Korea is aware that he is living on borrowed blood. But now that he has recovered completely from his severe arm wounds, he has paid back his debt—with interest.

"Blood is better than life insurance when you are in combat," said the beribboned soldier who went into Korea with the 24th Infantry Division. "This way you live to be your own beneficiary. But, as with any insurance, someone has to pay the premiums.

"I was like a lot of other people until I got hit. I didn't realize what one pint of blood could mean to a man. Now that I have been lucky enough to learn my lesson and live to do something about it, I'm glad to pay my own way as far as the blood bank is concerned."

Corporal Durham, son of Mrs. Thomas Williams of (Westover Terrace) Knoxville, Tenn., is a good salesman, too. Not only has he given blood twice to pay back the blood which saved his life, but he also has talked several of his friends into making blood donations.

Highway Patrolman Drives Into Ditch to Miss Bus

MALIBU, Calif.—A highway patrolman recently drove his patrol car off the road at 95 miles an hour to avoid hitting a school bus that pulled out in his path as he raced after two speeding cars.

Patrolman Elmer Hoskins, 39, was chasing two cars on U.S. Highway 101 when it happened. "I remember seeing those little faces and big eyes looking out the window at me," he said. "I couldn't do anything else."

The patrol car hit a ditch, bounced and rolled. Hoskins, slightly bruised, cited the driver for failing to give right of way to an emergency vehicle.

Dishwasher Is Reprimanded In Returning Lost Check

WAUKEGAN, Ill.—A dishwasher in a local grill found a certified check for $3,500, but says all the gratitude he received for returning it to the owner was a good bawling out.

John Vobwinkel said he found the check in an envelope while sweeping out the grill. He telephoned the man who had lost it.

"When he came over he gave me a good bawling out for opening the envelope."

The dishwasher said he almost threw the envelope away, and would have if he hadn't noticed the check it contained.

Eireman's Life not Quite So Glamorous After All

SAN DIEGO—So, you think a fireman lives a glamorous life?

During one 24-hour period, the local fire department responded to six calls.

They couldn't find a man supposedly overcome by ammonia; they checked a report of gas leaking from a car; doused a rubbish fire in a storm drain; failed to find a car reported on fire; and rushed out to a burning refuse dump, reported to be a blazing brush fire.

One call turned out to be a fire—a small grass fire that caused no damage.

Two Rich Men

Lesson for February 10, 1952

EVERYBODY knows that Jesus took an interest in the poor. But there is another side of the picture. Jesus took just as keen an interest in the rich as in the poor. One of his most famous and penetrating sayings was spoken in connections with two rich men. The first is Jesus interested in people. He saw him. He was young and poor was. He was a side and still he knew that a man's money has both temptations and opportunities for good that the poor man never has.

The Rich Men

Jesus met two men of means who were quite different from each other. One was a nameless, had to recommend him. He was but perhaps that was the last people thought about when saw him. He was young and poor; when he came to Jesus later interview he did not walk, He was a man of executive ability, for the story calls him a "ruler." He was good, at least claimed to have kept all the Commandments, and Jesus did contradict him.

Furthermore, he was eager in the right direction. His principal ambition was not to have more money but to have eternal life. On top of all this, he loved him. You would certainly think that a man like that couldn't miss. But he did.

The other hand was the man Zacchaeus. Being a publican, and he is perfectly obvious that he didn't have been either honest or scrupulous, for it was only the greedy and dishonest in those days who did amass fortunes by collecting taxes, for it took time to rise to the top in the publican game. As for interests for spiritual things, he seems not to have felt a bit of it. We may guess that Jesus was not the only one who loved the rich and taller; but if Jesus loved Zacchaeus, and he must have, he was perhaps the only person then in Jericho who did. No community likes a man who bleeds it white. Zacchaeus as it seems, it is this rich man, this bad rich man, who Jesus put in the end with a higher value than the "good" rich man.

Money the Master

WHEN last thing we see of the good rich man is his turning his back Goodness. He had a chance to follow Christ—the same chance that Peter and Matthew had, the same command. Follow Me!

What great service Christ had in mind for him we shall never know. All we know is that he made the great refusal. Perhaps he thought better of it and came back later on; but it is not likely. The last we see of him is his back, as he "went away sorrowful."

Jesus never said of him what he said of Zacchaeus. Salvation never came to his house. He never inherited the eternal life he wanted. Then it came right down to a choice: money, or eternal life, he chose money. He was willing to be a Christian, but not a sacrificing Christian. He only wanted to be a half-hearted Christian. He thought to himself (no doubt) as master of his money; instead, money was his master. His money talked so loud he could not hear well what Jesus said. His money talked so fast that he made what Jesus demanded sound as nonsense.

Money the Servant

JESUS did not ask all his followers to get rid of every penny they possessed. Zacchaeus, for instance, did not renounce all he had. What he did was to give back all that did not belong to him, and give it in a good deal that did. Jesus did not ask this man to do more.

A doctor does not always prescribe the same operation for every one. For some men, an appendix is a source of danger and must be removed at once, for others, an appendix may safely and most wisely be left where it is.

Jesus could see that the younger man was at the point where money was about to be his master; so instead it was for the older man. But the first could not shake off the tyranny of his wealth, his own wealth; the other man could.

For the servant of Christ, money is not in itself a sin. It is a root of sin when its voice is louder than the voice of the Master. It is the means of sin when it stops the ears to a cry of need. No one can call himself a Christian when he refuses his money in the service of Christ.

For Top Pasturers--Top Dress

By R. B. Hudgins, County Agent

According to the best information available, the supply of feed for livestock is declining. With the rapid increase in livestock in Virginia we must maintain enough feed for this livestock to get economical production. Good farming practices can increase the livestock feed supply this year.

Top-dress pastures and hay land with fertilizer. There is still time to top-dress pastures. Fertilizer applied this winter will pay off in better pastures in the spring. Top-dressing pastures anytime between now and the end of February will give a boost to growth in the spring and summer. Fertilization is particularly important this year because of the drought last season. If you want to keep your pastures growing and producing the maximum grazing for your livestock, you'll have to fertilize them.

By fertilizing your pasture properly you secure not only high yields of quality forage but 2 weeks earlier grazing in the spring and 2 weeks later grazing in the fall. That, of course, means more money in your pocket. A well-fertilized pasture should furnish from 210 to 240 days of grazing each year. This is your cheapest source of feed since good pastures are worth about 75 cents a day per cow. This figure is based upon $75.00 a ton for dairy feed.

If your pastures are good, keep them good by top-dressing. If they are poor, improve them with top-dressing. Remember that proper fertilization helps to keep a balance of grasses and legumes in your pastures.

Your pastures use up plant food. Good pastures must have adequate mineral fertilizers and lime. Phosphate and potash are the most important mineral fertilizers. You should use enough lime to raise the pH to 6.0 or above.

In some instances your pasture may need nitrogen. However, if the pasture is well fertilized and limed and has a good balance of legumes and grasses, the legumes will usually furnish enough nitrogen. Nitrogen will increase the early spring growth of grasses.

If you have not limed your pasture field in several years, have your soil tested. Then lime to a pH from 6.0 to 6.5. Heavier soils usually need from 2 to 3 tons of ground limestone to the acre and lighter soils from 1 to 2 tons, depending upon the soil tests.

Your soil usually needs phosphate and potash. So, generally, you would use fertilizers containing these two plant foods. If you use only phosphorus, and the soil is low in potash, the plants will not grow well. Good production of pasture legumes depends upon a balanced supply of phosphorus and potash. If the legumes grow well, they will supply nitrogen for grasses. Weeds, pale yellow grasses, poor stands of legumes and weak growth are signs that your pastures need plant food.

For ladino clover-grass mixtures (if the balance is 50-50 or 60-40) top-dress in late fall, winter or very early spring with 500 to 800 pounds to the acre of 0-14-14 or 2-12-12 fertilizer. If a soil test shows your soil is low in potash, use 0-10-20 instead.

If grass in the mixture is thinning out, top-dress in winter or very early spring with 500 to 800 pounds per acre of 5-10-10 fertilizer. This should increase the amount of grass. Let grass grow up to 12 to 15 inches tall in spring before grazing or cutting for hay or silage.

If the clover is thinning out, top-dress with phosphate and potash. Keep grasses grazed or clipped close in early spring and during late summer. If potash is low, top-dress with 0-10-20. If pasture is overgrazed and has a poor stand of ladino clover, use phosphate and potash and reseed ladino clover. You can re-seed ladino clover by disking the sod lightly, broadcasting the seed, and cultipacking it. Grazing the grass when it is closely and quickly (within 2 days) in early spring will help the ladino clover seedlings get started.

Rabies High In Virginia

"During 1951 Virginia had its highest incidence of rabies since 1944, with a total of 223 cases of animal rabies reported," according to a recent report submitted to the Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries by Dr. Mack I. Shanholtz, State Health Commissioner.

It is generally known that the dog is the most common transmitter of rabies, but the occurence of the virus in foxes makes it of particular significance in the wildlife field.

Sections hardest hit during the past year were Fauquier and Loudoun Counties in northern Virginia; Lee, Washington and Wythe Counties in southern Virginia; and the City of Richmond. With this report comes startling information from the State Health Department that 1952 is well on its way to being another bad year for rabies in Virginia. Already, during January, 26 cases of positive rabid foxes have been reported from the three northern counties of Fauquier, Loudoun, and Warren. One case has been reported, thus far, from Wythe County; already there have been six during January. There were 19 cases in Loudoun County in 1951; already there have been six. And during 1951, there were two cases reported in Warren County, and thus far in 1952 there have been 14.

The majority of foxes found rabid have been grays, but some were reds. Many more cases of rabid foxes have been reported but the figures listed are only those definitely proven rabid by the State Health Department.

ESSAY CONTEST NEARS GOAL

Over 200 schools, from 87 of Virginia's 100 counties, have officially entered the Fifth Annual Wildlife Essay Contest jointly sponsored by the Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries and the Virginia Division of the Izaak Walton League of America. Officials hope that 100 per cent of Virginia's counties will have at least one school entry before the contest closes February 28. The 87 counties thus far represented in the contest show a notable increase over the 56 counties which were represented in the essay contest last year.

Contest officials of the Commission and the League believe that the conservation contest, now in its fifth, successful year, is one of the soundest methods of getting conservation across to young citizenry.

BOY SCOUTS OF AMERICA

FORWARD ON LIBERTY'S TEAM
The Boy Scouts of America have selected this as the theme of their 1952 program—the first year of a three-year plan to further enlarge their usefulness to our nation.
Since its beginning in 1910, this high-purpose organization has affected the lives of more than 15,500,000 boys and men, who have, in turn, contributed to the general welfare of us all.
No yardstick can measure the harvest of advantage Boy Scouts bring to the nation and the community. But the Scouts depend on the active support of each one of us to increase and extend these benefits.
We are proud that many VEPCOVIANS, many of them your friends and neighbors, take an active part in this thriving movement . . . evidence again that VEPCO is a citizen in the communities it serves.
Let's help the Boy Scout go forward on liberty' team!
